Continental, AMC rates climb

Airline fares have officially taken flight at Kwajalein.

As of Oct. 1, it now costs more money to fly AMC, as well as Continental in some cases. The new rates will mostly affect official travel, such as company-paid holiday leave and TDYs.

AMC is raising tickets from $940 to $1,184 round-trip. Additional baggage rates and pet fees are both going up $6, to $90 per bag and per pet. The round-trip government rate on Continental is taking a leap from $871.60 to $1,275.60 on the Kwajalein to Honolulu route. The commercial rates for additional baggage and pets are the same as AMC.

However, commercial rates on Continental are not going up. There are two rates. The first option is a round-trip ticket for $975, with at

MTV or no TV? USAKA seeks input whether to bring cable

By Peter Rejcek

Here's the big picture in a 30-second sound byte: Cable TV is a real option, with such channels as Discovery, CNN and ESPN, among others on the dish. The cost? About $35.

So, the question is, do you want it?

"[Cable] is not a dead issue. We are still trying," said Lt. Col. Steve Morris, USAKA assistant chief of staff, Operations.

The latest proposal puts the project into the hands of a private company, the Marshallese Broadcast Company. MBC has successfully brought cable to Majuro, and hopes to do the same on Ebeye and Kwajalein, according to Morris.

But to do that, the company needs a minimum number of subscribers on Kwajalein and Ebeye to justify their expenditure, according to Don Hornbrook, USAKA Information Management chief. The command sent out a survey today to judge the community's response to the proposal. In a previous survey, an overwhelming majority, better than three-quarters

This year rates as second driest in last half-century

Kwajalein is a sun worshipper's dream and a water utilities superintendent's nightmare this year.

Last month was the driest September on record in 56 years of recorded rainfall and second driest year as of Sept. 30, said Gina Deola, Aeromet chief meteorologist.

Due to the lack of rainfall, RSE Utilities superintendent Stan Jazwinski asked that residents cut back on both potable and non-potable water use by restricting watering of plants and lawns to an hour or less every three days and to check for leaks or running toilets.

Rainfall for September averages 11.83 inches, while rainfall for the year by Sept. 30 is 71.42 inches, Deola said.

"We've had only 40 to 50 percent of normal monthly precipitation," she said. "We wound up September with 8.06 inches below normal for the month. As of Sept. 30, this year we only have a whopping 38.66 inches."

Except for July and August, the water plant has pumped water from the lens well every month since January, Jazwinski said. Although water reserves are sufficient for the next three months, the island could be in trouble if next year is also dry.

"We had a drought in '98 and '99," Jazwinski said. "[The island] needs two years of 100 inches each year to recharge the lens well."

Although Kwajalein recorded about 100 inches last year, this year has been a drought, and if next year is dry, the island's reserves will be extremely low, Jazwinski said.

There is a possibility, based on long-range forecast models, that normal precipitation total for August, September and October can be met if the island gets about 19 inches of rain this month, Deola said.

October is certainly off to a wet start. As of Friday morning, Kwajalein has recorded two inches of rain.

"There are conflicting forecast model results out there, but it is not out of the realm of possibilities, since 20.05 inches fell in October 1964," Deola noted.

Holiday recalls nation's heritage, renews pledge to freedom

In a memorandum to all of us in U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command, Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Cosumano Jr., our commanding general, said, "Columbus Day commemorates the discovery of the 'New World' and is an appropriate time to remember and honor the sacrifices and struggles of all who came to this land in search of freedom. Freedom is still our most precious national treasure. Current events remind us of the grim threats to our freedom and the American way of life. Like those who came to this New World, we cannot take freedom for granted."

With the events of Sept. 11, we should pause and think about our nation's heritage and remember how our forefathers—men of wisdom, courage and vision — declared an independent nation dedicated to the principles of human rights and the spirit of liberty.

During the past 225 years, we have met adversity on many fronts. The defense of freedom has been costly. President John Kennedy said, "The cost of freedom's always high, but Americans have always paid it. One path we shall never choose, and that is the path of surrender, or submission. Our goal is not the victory of might, but the vindication of right; not peace at the expense of freedom, but both peace and freedom here in this hemisphere, and, we hope, around the world."

To answer the events of Sept. 11, our Commander in Chief, President George W. Bush, has declared war on terrorism. And, we see a remarkable unity of our people, and a rekindled national pride. Here on Kwajalein, let us celebrate Columbus Day by renewing our commitment to America and the freedoms we enjoy.

God Bless America.

Nowhere News debuts as nice addition to local journalism scene

Over my career, I've faced a number of situations that made me nervous and one or two that made me downright scared. Now journalists are trained to adapt to situations, carry on and get the story, no matter what, and after years in the business I learned the lessons as best I could.

But until six weeks ago, I never faced a room full of sixth-graders who wanted to be journalists.

Mrs. Bennett, on behalf of her group of young wordsmiths, asked if I would join them for lunch and share a few thoughts on journalism. Seems the class started their own student newspaper and they were kicking off activities for the year.

Here at the Hourglass, we'd never been asked to help out before.

How could I say "no?" Besides, Mrs. Bennett is my wife, though I probably would've done it for another teacher, too, and there was a free Coke and a bologna sandwich included in the deal — the proverbial free lunch.

So we've met every Saturday since, and when it's said "kids say the darndest things," well, they ask the darndest questions, too.

Every newspaper ought to have a kid on staff. They're not afraid or inhibited by social convention to ask anything.

We talked about picking stories, conducting interviews, writing stories, laying out pages and editing copy, to name a few topics.

The product, the Middle of Nowhere News (they voted on the name), is inserted in today's edition, but let me point out a few behind-the-scenes notes.

These kids on the staff had never, to my knowledge, written anything for publication before. They gave up lunches and worked after hours for nothing more than the satisfaction of printing a student newspaper. They don't get a grade for this.

And they've tackled some real issues that affect kids. Check out the lead story on the Skate Park and regulations regarding make-shift ramps.

They noticed the "icky water" at their school and did a story on it. I think you'll find the explanation clear and logical, but it's good to know, too, and clears up a lot of rumors.

The features and reports on community events come from a kid's perspective, something the Hourglass simply can't duplicate due to our ages.

So my hat is off to them, and I look forward to seeing more editions of the Nowhere News throughout the school year.

While we're talking about inserts, you might have noticed no inserts in the Hourglass recently, but several in your mailbox. Well, we had some distribution issues to work out with Threatcon/FPCON measures, but we're back on track, now.

The previous rules, however, still apply. Those are:

1. Three inserts per issue, on a first-come, first-served basis. This is a free service and there's only so much we can do and still get the paper in everyone's box by 4:30 p.m.

2. One insert per organization. You'll have to be concise and creative, but that's what good advertising is all about.

3. You may use both sides of the sheet, but if you use only one side, we reserve the right to use the other for someone else's insert. That way we get more advertisers in the paper and save a few trees.

See you in the funny pages, or maybe the Nowhere News.

Fire Department covering all the bases with fire prevention week

By Barbara Johnson
Feature Writer

It may not be a goal in baseball, but striking out is a good thing when it comes to fire prevention.

This year's national theme for Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 9-15, is "Cover the Bases and Strike Out Fire." What's the connection between baseball and fire prevention?

"Baseball is a team sport, and we want to involve children and teachers more in fire prevention — we want a team effort," said Tommy Marhold, Kwajalein Fire Department fire inspector and coordinator of next week's events. Marhold said the fire department will work with children and families all week on simple steps they can take to avoid fires.

Cooking, heating and electricity are the three main causes of home fires, Marhold said, and together they cause more than half of all fires in the home. The three are represented as first, second and third base in the fire safety educational materials to be used next week. "Safe at home base" includes a reminder to check smoke detectors and practice a home escape plan with parents.

Although the goal is to get the information out to everybody, the focus is on educating children, Marhold said, adding, "Over 20 percent of all deaths from fires nationwide are attributed to children playing with fire."

"That's why teaching children about fire is so important," he said. "The main reason is that children are curious. They want to see how fire burns and they usually do it at home. We want to teach them before they teach themselves."

Next week will include a number of activities:

- School tours of the fire station scheduled throughout the week for kindergarten through fifth-graders. The tours will include seeing a firefighter don the gear, climbing on the fire trucks, spraying water from a small fire hose, refreshments and a video.

- Fire station open house for the community Thursday, Oct. 11, 6-8 p.m.

- Poster contest based on the theme for students. First, second and third place prizes will be given for each grade level at an award ceremony at George Seitz Elementary School Oct. 13.

- Fire prevention display for the community at the mini-mall Monday, Oct. 15, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The display will include the winning elementary school posters and pictures from past fires at Kwajalein, and fire prevention brochures and smoke detectors will be distributed.

least a seven-day advance purchase and carries with it a 25 percent cancellation or change-of-itinerary fee. It is non-refundable. The second option is a $1,109.70 round-trip fare with a seven-day advance purchase and a $75 cancellation fee. These are the same fares state-side visitors are charged for travel between Hono and Kwaj, according to Yvonne Duarte, Continental Travel Agency manager.

Matt Reed, USAKA Supply and Transportation chief, said a key advantage to the government rate is that it is unrestricted, which allows passengers to make changes without any fees.

Duarte noted airline loads are very light these days, and fewer passengers could result in Continental and Aloha Airlines cutting back on the number of flights per week.

"Our loads are really, really low," she said, adding that Continental has experienced a 40 percent reduction since the Sept. 11 attacks.

"We've had more returned tickets than sold tickets the last three weeks," she said, explaining that passengers aren't necessarily afraid to fly, they "just don't feel like it."

Reed said he has not heard that the airlines are considering reducing flights to Kwajalein.

The government rate on Aloha Airlines remains stable for fiscal year 2002, and is now the best deal at $870.60 round-trip. Like Continental, Aloha has two commercial rates. The $975.60 fare requires at least a seven-day advance purchase, with a $100 charge for any changes to the itinerary. It is non-refundable. The $1,289.60 ticket carries no restrictions and is fully refundable. Extra baggage fees are the same as AMC. Aloha does not allow pets.

Incidentally, all rates on Continental on the Kwajalein to Guam route remain the same. The cost for a round-trip ticket (three-day advance purchase, 30-day maximum stay) is $854 plus taxes. To Majuro, the round-trip fare is $216, to Kosrae, $257, to Pohnpei, $360, and to Chuuk, $545.

Duarte reminds passengers that no fare is guaranteed until they purchase their tickets. Passengers are also encouraged to travel with passports, though all airlines, as of press time, were still accepting a birth certificate along with some form of identification.

Marshallese company could bring cable to Kwaj ...

ters of respondents, said they would be willing to pay for cable TV. The average amount residents were willing to pay came to about $22.70 per month, according to Morris.

However, at the time, the command had been exploring the possibility of "hard" cabling the entire island, which would have allowed residents to add modems for high-speed Internet without sacrificing their phone line. But the price tag for that project, somewhere between $2 and $3 million, canceled that idea.

Then along came MBC, which first proposed to capitalize a project to cable the island and install a satellite dish on Kwajalein. "They were going to do Ebeye, anyway," Morris said.

Again, too much money. The cost to the command was about $500,000 per year to provide the service for free. Nor did the command want to get into the cable company business, according to Morris. Further discussions with the company resulted in bringing the cost down to about $400,000 by using a Multi-channel Multi-point Distribution microwave system, or MMDS, on Kwajalein. Once again, too expensive, and USAKA would still be involved in operating a cable company.

The bottom line

The latest and greatest proposal takes USAKA completely out of the picture, and locates the MMDS transmitter on Ebeye. The system would operate much like a stateside cable service, Morris explained. Individual family housing units would require a small antenna on the roof to receive the signal from Ebeye and an inside decoder to de-scramble the signal. BQ buildings would receive programming from a single antenna, piped in via their existing distribution with a decoder provided for each subscriber. The cost is estimated at about $35 per month per subscriber, plus a $200 deposit, refundable when the service is canceled. A one-time fee of $30 would apply for extra drops in a residence.

"They are very anxious to do this," Morris said, referring to MBC. He added that the project is also a boon to RMI economic development. "It creates jobs ... It allows them to be more self-sufficient."

Morris noted that Ebeye now has a reliable source of power thanks to the efforts of the American Samoa Power Authority. The company would likely run a satellite office on Kwajalein to handle service calls, he added.

What do you get for your money? Live channels include CTN (Chinese TV from Taipei), Discovery, Animal Planet, ESPN, CNN, Bloomberg (news), NHK (Japanese), TFC (Filipino), TCM/Cartoon Network, MTV, CNBC (news), 24-hour Weather Radar, Kwajalein Flight Channel and BBC (news). Tape delay channels include ABC, A&E and PREL (Pacific Regional Educational Laboratory). Residents would still receive the two AFRTS channels whether or not they sign up for cable, Morris said, although they would have to install an inexpensive signal splitter device to get AFRTS and MBC simultaneously.

If there is enough community interest, Morris said MBC can have service available fairly quickly. Hornbrook added that the technology is a proven system.

"MMDS has been around for about 30 years," Hornbrook said. It operates on the microwave line-of-site principle, in which the small receiving antenna has to "see" an unobstructed view of the transmitting antenna, he explained.

"Kwaj is an ideal locale for this technology, as the island is relatively flat," he added. The system's average range is about 20 miles; the signal is unaffected by weather variations.

Tuning in?

So, are people willing to pay? Do they want cable TV at all?

An informal Hourglass survey found a handful of respondents somewhat split, largely along gender lines. Men seem willing and eager to pay—some quite a lot—while more women are saying they've got better things to do with their time and don't want any further temptations to sit in front of the tube.

Javier Mora said he and his friends have talked about the issue and are definitely willing to pay $35, even up to $50. "More than two [channels]," he said, raising two fingers in emphasis.

Dolita Dohrman said she's not thrilled with the idea, largely because she'd rather not have the temptation to stay inside and watch TV.

"I know we will [get cable], if it happens," she said in resignation. "I think it would be really cool not to have TV."

Sabrina Mumma concurred, saying she would probably not get cable. "I didn't have cable in the states," she said.

The issue appears likely to split families, as well. As Jack Riordan pointed out, "I have two answers. My son and I would love it. My wife would hate it."

Dianne Morris, contrary to her husband's preferences, is also not thrilled with the idea of contending with more TV channels. "We just don't watch TV. We live outside in our backyard."

The idea of cable TV appears to be popular on Ebeye.

Ebeye resident Helmer Emos said $35 is a reasonable price, and is cheaper than renting videos for his grandchildren every month. Plus, he said, "I watch sports."

Ebeye resident Romeo Alfred said he's a cable TV proponent, mostly for news and Discovery. He said $35 a month shouldn't be too expensive for most Marshallese who work at Kwajalein.

The Discovery channel, incidentally, seems to be a deal maker or breaker for some viewers, particularly those less inclined to support the project. "It also depends on what was offered," Mumma said.

Others are ready to write a check right now, practically rabid for a greater TV channel selection. Said Lloyd Jordan, "I would pay for it as long as it's not over $250 a month."

Still free?

Morris said the command has not necessarily exhausted all of its options in its quest to bring free cable TV to residents. USAKA is still studying an option that would be similar to the MBC project, but would leave the company out of the picture. Engineers are studying what the costs might be for the command to install such a system. Morris said while there's no money in the budget to fund capitalization costs, if there is enough support in the community, the command might consider alternative ways to fund the project through public support.

He said the command could consider fund-raisers or charge residents a one-time fee. Or Kwaj could follow Roi-Namur's example, he said, where volunteers run and troubleshoot a cable system that includes Discovery channel and several other premium channels. Roi residents chip in on costs once a year to keep the system running.

"We may have to pull together the Kwaj community to make this happen," Morris said. "I encourage every household in the community to take a few seconds to answer the survey right away so we can compare our options over the next few weeks."

IT'S OFFICIAL: Refs allow the games to go on

By Bruce Sinkula
Sports Writer

When they do their jobs well, no one usually notices.

And that's a compliment in their eyes.

Without the dozens of people who serve as referees and umpires, organized sport leagues on Kwajalein wouldn't be the same.

"It's a weird breed that really likes officiating," claimed Simone Smead, Community Activities manager, who referees soccer, basketball, water polo and occasionally softball.

For two other iconic sports officials on Vernon Adcock, right, has been a fixture on the softball diamond as a referee. The refs play an integral part in all of Kwajalein's adult sports.

Kwajalein, it's affection for the game that draws them to serve as arbiters.

"I like it and I enjoy the game," said Labtak Langrus, who has officiated basketball games for over 20 years on Kwajalein and Ebeye.

"Games [with good players] are easier to referee," he added, noting that there were more quality players back in the 1980s, when he first donned the "zebra" shirt.

Nowadays, Langrus laments about seeing "a lot of traveling" which, for him, is the toughest call to make. That's especially the case because his neighbors on Ebeye tend to be the most frequent offenders, he said.

Basketball is, arguably, the most difficult sport to officiate.

"Basketball and soccer require a lot of running as an official," Smead noted.

"Softball is easier," added Langrus, who has officiated that sport for over four years.

For countless softball games, the nattily clad Tom Little was a fixture behind the plate. However, Little PCS'ed last month, "and he will be sorely missed," Smead said.

Doing his part to fill the umpiring void is Vernon Adcock.

Like Little, Adcock is a certified Amateur Softball Association umpire who began working softball games soon after his arrival at Kwajalein in 1997.

"I just try to make sure the game is fun and safe,"

Adcock said.

The least favorite

call to make during a softball game is "when a fielder knocks a ball out of play. It's hard to know exactly where [the base runners] were [at that time]," Adcock explained.

Umpiring on Kwajalein is not strictly a fraternal endeavor, either.

"There has been a long history of female umps ever since I have been a kid. They have certainly been big contributors to the program," Smead said.

Officials like Adcock and Langrus, who have years of experience prior to applying their trade on Kwajalein, are among the minority on Kwajalein.

"The preponderance of our umps are homegrown," Smead said. "We offer an officiating clinic prior to the start of each season."

The pay isn't bad, either.

"Officials are paid relatively well at $14 a game," Smead added. "It's ... similar to city rec leagues in the states."

Public Announcement

The U.S. government remains deeply concerned about the security of Americans overseas. Following the attacks on Sept. 11, we have continuing concern based on threatening rhetoric from extremist groups and the potential for further terrorist actions against American citizens and interests. In this environment of increased tension and concern, the Department urges Americans to review their circumstances carefully and to take any measures they deem necessary to ensure their personal safety. The Department will continue to develop information about potential threats to Americans overseas and to share with them credible threat information through its Consular Information Program documents. These documents are readily available on the Internet at <http://travel.state.gov>.

As the U.S. government has reported in Public Announcements and Travel Warnings over the last several months, U.S. citizens and interests abroad may be at increased risk of terrorist actions from extremist groups. In addition to information included in country-specific documents, we recently advised that we had unconfirmed information that terrorist actions may be taken against U.S. military facilities and/or establishments frequented by U.S. military personnel in Korea and Japan. We also remain concerned about information we received in May 2001 that American citizens may be the target of a terrorist threat from extremist groups with links to Usama Bin Ladin's Al-Qaida organization. These individuals have not distinguished between official and civilian targets.

In light of the above information, U.S. government facilities worldwide remain at a heightened state of alert. U.S. government facilities have and will continue to temporarily close or suspend public services, as necessary, to review their security posture and ensure its adequacy. In those instances, U.S. Missions will make every effort to provide emergency services to American citizens.

U.S. citizens planning to travel abroad should consult the Department of State's Public Announcements, Travel Warnings, Consular Information Sheets, and regional travel brochures, all of which are available at the Consular Affairs Internet web site at <http://travel.state.gov>. American citizens overseas may contact the American Citizens Services unit of the nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate for up-to-date information on security conditions. American citizens in need of emergency assistance should telephone the nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate before visiting there.

In addition to information on the Internet, U.S. travelers may hear recorded information by calling the Department of State in Washington, D.C. at 202-647-5225 from their touch-tone telephone, or receive information by automated telefax by dialing 202-647-3000 from their fax machine.

Give us your two cents.
We'll give you change and maybe $100

In October, the Kwajalein community will receive two surveys on quality of life — Food and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. Look for them and help us determine how to allocate resources in the near- and long-term future.

We want your input so much, we're willing to pay for it.
For each survey, we'll draw out the names of ten respondents, who will each receive a $100 gift certificate good at Yokwe Yuk Fine Dining, Three Palms Snack Bar, Sunrise Bakery, Bowling Alley, Macy's, Macy's West and Gimbel's.

And look for the report to the community on the results in November.

Still under investigation

Fire Department inspectors Tommy Marhold, foreground, and Michael Kearney look through the rubble of four boat shacks destroyed and damaged by a fire that started around 11:25 p.m. Thursday. No one was injured. The fire is still under investigation. Kearney said high winds last night helped fan the flames. "It was cooking," he said.

More Reserve, National Guard units called to dutyFrom Department of Defense

An additional 3,283 Army Reservists and Army National Guard members are being called to active duty as part of the partial mobilization authorized by President George W. Bush. This brings the total Army Reserve force soldiers called to active duty to 7,765 to date.

The soldiers called to active duty in this announcement serve in 43 different units from 13 states and the District of Columbia.

Among the specialties represented by these units are military police, military intelligence and infantry.

In addition, 130 more members of the Naval Reserve are being called to active duty. This brings the total Naval Reserve called to active duty to 2,250 to date.
